

Home Air Filter

Contributed by Ram Janspur
Friday, 16 June 2006
Last Updated Thursday, 20 July 2006

How clean is the air in your home? Most people don't know it, but the air in your house is around three times more polluted than what's outdoors. If you actually stop to think about this, it makes total sense. Especially during the winter months when we leave our homes shut up tight. Sure we step in and out on a daily basis, but most of that old, stale air remains captured inside our walls. Then we get to breathe it in and out all night long. It sounds pretty bad, huh? Every time someone in your family coughs or sneezes, you then get to breathe it all in. Not to mention when someone in your home gets sick and all of those germs are contained inside. Good luck avoiding that nasty flu or cold. Although this is definitely not the most healthy way to live, we can't just leave our windows open year round unless you have a camera security systems to watch over for housebreakers or intruders. By January we'd be popsicles. Fortunately there is another option. It's time to invest in a home air filter. These cool new innovations are quite easy to come by now days.

Do you have a quality home air filter cleaning your home's atmosphere? These nifty, yet compact machines can purify the air in your home over 90 percent. That's much cleaner. All of those nasty dust mites and germs that you inhale on a regular basis and don't even notice, can be obliterated with a home air filter. I remember when my wife and I first decided to purchase a home air filter about four years back. A salesman came to our door with the Filter Queen home air filtration system. I have to admit I wasn't interested until he explained what it did and how it actually worked. It pulls the air from inside your home into it, hence capturing all of the impurities and then sends the air back out. I was amazed at how refreshing it kept the air in my daughter's bedroom. I found that it was great to place one on each floor. The air became much cleaner and crisper in no time at all. If you're looking for a quality home air filter to rid your humble abode of unhealthy germs and dust mites, you might want to begin online. There are a number of great home air filters to choose from these days. Companies like Front Gate and Sharper Image always offer some quality products to take a gander at. A home air filter is also ideal if you or one of your family members suffer from allergies. Get your cleaner home today.